State of Alabama, Jefferson County

On this 13th day of May in the year of our Board 1834 personally appeared in open Court before me Samuel Chapman Judge of the seventh provincial Circuit of said State, Nicholas Starnes, a resident of said County aged seventy eight years who being duly sworn according to law doth on his oath make the following declaration to obtain the benefit of the Act of Congress passed on the 7th of June 1832. That he was born on the sixth of November 1756 on the County Creek in the State of Maryland & when one year old was taken by his parents to the County of Fairfax in the State of Virginia where they remained until he was 16, when they removed to Craven District in the State of South Carolina where he lived until the commencement of the revolutionary war when he again removed to that portion of the country then known as the County of Washington in the State of Virginia after remaining there for some time he was on the 13th of September 1775 a volunteer under Colonel William Campbell in the service of the United States & was attached to Captain Crabtree's company of mountaineers. At this time he was first called out to serve in an expedition under Colonel Arthur Campbell against the Tories who had assembled at one Coxes' New River. The object was to disperse them, but after marching 50 miles, information was had that the Tories had abandoned their position there, we then returned home after an absence of ten days. In the autumn of the same year he was again called into service, acting as a Sergeant in the same company & troop commanded at this time by Colonel William Campbell, [illegible word] for New River again, against the Tories embodied at Coxes', in this expedition we crossed the Holston [River] at Starnes' Ford, marching to New River, then crossing & met Col. Cleaveland's [sic, Benjamin Cleveland's] troops, joining them we all marched over the River to Coxes' house (which had been plundered) where we were informed that the Tories had left there days previous; here the forces of Col. Campbell & Cleveland separated & commenced a pursuit: Colonel Campbell came up with them at a place called the Big Glade[?], the Tories fled and we pursued about twelve miles, we then returned home, this expedition having lasted three weeks. In the latter end of September 1780 as well as he now remembers, he was again called into service against Col. Ferguson [Patrick Ferguson] in the South of King's mountain, in this expedition he acted as Sergeant in a company of Captain Crabtree [William Crabtree], having Colonel William Campbell for their commander, they took up the line of march crossing the Holston [River] again at Starnes Ford, New River at the mulberry fields & the Catawba [River] at a place the name of which is not now recollected. In this battle he had no Captain (Crabtree having been left with about two hundred footmen in what was then called the rich valley) he fought under the immediate command of Col. Campbell in person. After the battle of King's Mountain the wounded were placed under his care, with them [illegible word] & they ordered to return home, this expedition lasted three months. In the autumn & winter of '80 & '81, he volunteered & served as a Sergeant in Captain Pruit's [?] Company in an expedition against the Cherokee Indians, in this expedition they marched about 100 miles across the Holston at Casson's [?] Ford, 30 miles from which came up with Colonel Sevier [John Sevier], we marched to the French Broad [River] & down that to a little River called Tellico and after camping there a few days, Captain Pruit's Company marched to Hiwassee, from there we rejoined Colonel Sevier at Tellico & from thence we returned home. This expedition lasted five weeks & two days as well as he can now remember. This expedition they killed 14 Indians & burned 16 towns. From the 13th of September 1775 on to the close of the revolutionary troubles, he always considered himself liable & held himself ready to march at an hour's warning in defense of the Country; indeed during this period his services were called for to act under General St. Clair against the Indians but owing to the [illegible word] situation of his family at that time, he was compelled to hire a substitute at one hundred Dollars, none of which has ever been returned to him at any time. After the close of the revolution he moved into the State of Tennessee in the valley of the same name, the County not remembered, in which State he lived until the 3rd of June 1829 when he removed to this County where he has ever since lived. He says that he does not now remember to have ever received any discharge from service except from Captain Pruett which has long since been lost. He has never had any commission during his service. He is personally known in his present neighborhood to John Burford, Capt. Geo. Green & Peter Crawford, any or all of whom he thinks no whale his character for truth & could testify to the same if required.

He hereby relinquishes every claim whatever to any pension or annuity except the present, & he declares that his name is not on any pension roll of any Agency of any State.

Sworn & subscribed to the day & year aforesaid.

S/ Nicholas Starnes, X his mark
